4) Your client has been told by a psychologist that her baby's score on the mental scale of the Bayley Scales of Infant Development is "within normal limits". You know that this means the mental (MDI) score was between

- a. 60 and 85
- b. 85 and 100
- c. 85 and 115
- d. 100 and 130

5) After a mother cancelled the previously scheduled home visit, you (the infant mental health specialist) arrive for the next appointment to find the mother asleep; the door is answered by her sister who then leaves you in the front room without an explanation. The baby is in the front room crawling on the hard floor with an obviously dirty diaper and without any apparent supervision, other than you. A few minutes later, the mother enters the room, appearing very sleepy and still in her pajamas. Best practice from an infant mental health perspective indicates that you would:

- a. Offer to leave and reschedule the visit for another time when she is more ready
- b. Ask if she would like you to change and feed the baby so that she can get more sleep
- c. Inform the mother that you may need to terminate services if she cannot fully participate
- d. Inquire about the baby's week and how things have been since your last home visit
